Foreword

In this book I am introducing Isis as she came to me, as the Goddess who has come back not only with her feminine attributes, but integrated with Adam, the Sacred Masculine. She introduces herself as our Voice, that voice we have been longing to express for so long. And accepting her as such in my own life has meant precisely to let go off of my own resistances to speak out who I really am.

A couple of nights ago, while I was taking some time for myself away from my busy life as mother of two teenage girls, the usual household activities, and my current job as translator, I realized that every single experience of my life has brought me here, and I am grateful for that.

Channeling is a way of communication and translation, which are, curiously enough, my two professional qualifications. I am divorced, as so many other women at this time, and such experience has gifted me with a new sense of what being a woman is and many of the patterns we have developed in our relationships with men. I am the mother of two lovely and conscious girls who continuously gift me with their laughter and beautiful challenges, and whose love and enthusiasm have kept me going even in the darkest moments. And for all this, I am grateful too.

I am indeed a child of the Crimson Circle, which I found at the very precise moment when I was ready for it to appear. For my dearest Teachers Tobias, Adamus and Kuthumi, I feel so much honor, love and gratitude.

And for Geoff Hoppe and Linda Benyo, I can hardly find the words to express how much I bless them every day for their courageous choice to be Standards of New Energy.

My gratitude extends to so many wonderful human angels who walk with me: Gerardo, my ex-husband, for becoming the best friend I could ever imagine having; my devoted family — mother, sister and brother— for their permanent support; Pilar and German, for having lovingly assisted and grounded my first channeling experiences and helped me to trust myself; and last but not least, David McMaster, whose mastery, patience, and time have provided me with the safe space to ground Isis' energies.

As conscious beings, we are transforming reality as we walk through it, so I dedicate these Isis materials to Shaumbra —past, present, and future— for the dimension of consciousness we create together, and which is helping through each of our individual voices to bring new potentials to Earth.

THANK YOU.

Introduction

The expansion of consciousness resembles a ladder. Whatever you can see while standing on one rung can change as you move up to the next one. It does not matter which rung you are at, there is always a next one in front of you. Humanity has come to a point where what they can start perceiving as they move upwards is absolutely fantastic, but they seem to have forgotten they can step up. However, there is a stirring within many that is sometimes gently inviting, some other times strongly pushing you to open your eyes and look around for something else. You cannot see the amazing view that is potentially available to you in the next rung because your eyes are closed. Then, open your eyes dear ones, wake up!

This information is made available to you in full love and in the full recognition that the time of Divine Humans has come.

Several of the concepts that are stated here in these channeled materials may conflict with your current beliefs. In fact, this is expected to happen. Nevertheless, nothing here is intended to degrade any of the ideas or beliefs that humanity may have held up until now, whether scientific, religious, philosophical, esoteric or of any other nature. Each of those has helped to bring humanity to this point.

Therefore, as you go through these pages, take only what resonates with you and leave the rest. If you are reading this, it is probably because you have heard your own call to awaken.

Why Isis and Adam? The Divine has no name. And for such reason, it has been given a number of names in an attempt to comprehend them. So names matter and matter not. We introduce ourselves as Adam and Isis because we know these names resonate deep within your memory. We are not necessarily the Egyptian Isis and the biblical Adam you can think of at first. In fact, those names were used in those accounts because their meaning comes from far beyond in the history of Creation.

As we meld together in human consciousness, we might be given other names. So for now, do not confuse yourselves in trying to explain them, just allow you to feel us under those names.

These materials are provided in a sacred space and contain much more consciousness than just the words.

Enjoy the ride.

In full love,

I Am Isis.

Chapter 1. The Experience of Love

I Am Isis, the Goddess, the Mother, the Voice. Yet, introducing myself only this way is limited, because I Am not without the Masculine. Recognizing my totality does not allow any further sense of separation.

Masculine and Feminine together are the whole of consciousness of what you call God. As I speak now, I am not only to be seen as the Goddess but rather as a new consciousness of the Divine, no longer in duality. This means that I, Isis, am the new Divine Feminine, complete onto myself as such, and Adam is also complete onto himself as the new Sacred Masculine, each of us carrying our feminine and masculine natures arranged in a new Way of Consciousness. We are One and Multiple at the same time, so throughout these pages we may refer to ourselves in singular or plural. Yet, for the purposes of these materials, I will still refer to Sacred Masculine and Divine Feminine, for the experience that is yielding its wisdom at this moment has been the experience of duality. And such duality is to be transcended through the understanding of what was in order to be able to transit into the new.

So, I Am Isis, known by many names, but in the simplest and fullest way, I Am the Divine Feminine.

You have known me through the forces of Mother Earth and Nature, through the loving embrace of the Virgin Mothers characterized through history in religions and myths. You have known me through endless female deities and representations. You have known me also through magic and sensuality, as sorceresses and witches, in all sorts of tales and stories conceived to keep the memory of me in your hearts and minds.

There has been the notion that the Feminine was gone, that I has left because I had been abused and mistreated.

And as I will be explaining in simplicity in the coming pages, this has been both true and false.

The history of Creation, which has been told from every standpoint that the limited human experience could ever allow and produce, is nothing but a love story.

Unfortunately, love stories have different stages, they are not always pink and sweet; they undergo severe situations, just as the love stories you have experienced yourselves. This story has contained misunderstandings and betrayals, temporary reencounters and abandonment, but also, and very importantly, it has given us so much joy, love, understanding and wisdom.

As shocking as it may seem to you at a time where your intuition cries within you that things should be better and more harmonious than what you currently are living in this beautiful planet, which appears to be so dark, terrible and threatening, I come at this time to tell you that All that you have experienced can be perceived and embraced from a grander and vaster perspective.

I know that sometimes you have been furious and frustrated because the God you were presented with, regardless of the name it may have been given, did not seem to respond to your questions, claims, and needs. And this has been because the God you long for is You. We are all God, and each of You is God also.

It has been God who has been experiencing this Creation, which has been the experience of all that we are not in order to discover what we truly are.

So, in a way that fulfills many of the old prophecies, the Goddess has come back to Earth to allow a whole new order of things.

Given that the parameters of the experience created by us all are based on duality, and therefore, on separation, we will explain part of this story in those terms, which you are ready to understand if you are reading this, with the purpose of bringing to you a glimpse of light that will let you know that you have been asleep. Living in a dream. And you are ready to awaken to a whole new consciousness of who you are.

Creation is eternal —yes— but it is in constant change and evolution. Creation and God are not perfect in the sense of something that is to be reached or achieved. Creation is perfect as it is —yes— in every present moment, for it is allowing itself to be all that it is at any given time, and then it changes into another perfect moment. I know this may be hard to grasp from the perspective of duality.

Yet, you can begin to sense that something is happening; you can perceive the change. And this change is not brought in or sent by a judging God to punish the evil ones and set a new order. This change is being brought in, created, and prompted by You, by human consciousness.

An experience yields the sweet fruits of wisdom once it is closed, when you can come to see all of the angles, twists and turns of it as a whole.

The story of Creation is that of the Divine Feminine and the Divine Masculine in separation. Each of us, Adam and Isis, have longed for completion onto each other since the very beginning, experiencing all that We are not in order to come to the full knowing of who We are.

This is why this is a time of healing, because healing is not really correcting something that may appear to be wrong, but rather giving yourself the understanding of what has been going on and using the tools available to you to release the pain and frustration of that experience to let go of it, and to allow it to move on and gift you with its wisdom.

Sometimes it may seem that love is an indescribable mystery that cannot be unveiled. Love cannot be grasped by the mind, it is not an understanding. It may be a bit more accurate to say that love is the driver of passion, creation, and experience. Nevertheless, humans are the experts of love; no matter how false this may sound within the paradoxes that condition your perspective today, you will come to see that the human experience, as disastrous as it sometimes looks, has created so much love in so many ways that you have allowed the coming back together of Isis and Adam, producing such an explosion of love throughout Creation similar to that first one when Creation was born, but this time taking us all to a whole new stage. We are undergoing some sort of new Big Bang.

What you are living now is the closing of the experience of separation on Earth. The Way of this has been that of corruption of every dual parameter to the point of destruction or evolution. The experience of separation, as reenacted on Earth, the experience of the longing for completion, which eventually resulted in deep human pain —physical, emotional, spiritual—, has transformed the very field of love.

As the Masculine and Feminine attributes were experienced in separation they have gradually become more and more corrupted. The good news is that the depth of such corruption in embodied experience, the excruciating pain and sadness brought by it has served a purpose — it has allowed the circle of that experience to end.

In fact, rather than just sharing attributes, such were virtually exchanged. Both Masculine and Feminine took on the attributes of the other, though each still maintained their own. This way, they have been able to fully exhaust the experience of what they are NOT, in order to recognize what they are.

Feminine and Masculine switched hearts so that they could eventually come back together. Then as Light became the space of all that is recognized and accepted, Darkness has kept a secret. The longing of the separation has always been present because those two hearts remember they belong together.

The Masculine used its creative attributes, which he thought were his own, and since he could not fully bring them to fruition, he developed the need for control. Those who could handle such power better became manipulative and insatiable.

The Feminine, unable to fully hold creations either, allowed herself to be abused and controlled. This created pain and sadness. She has been submitted for eons.

After running for eons in opposite directions within a same circle, the Divine Feminine and the Divine Masculine —God in experience— were able to come face to face again. The final portion of the circle was particularly critical and challenging because it involved the full acceptance of the whole set of experiences in the very core of Divinity itself.

So now, you are witnessing the destruction at every level of the paradoxes your world is based upon in order to create space for a consciousness that allows you to heal and close the past, knowing it has never been a punishment; to receive your wisdom as a divine being while still in the awesome and courageous human experience.

We are bringing these words to you so that you can start supporting consciously your own evolution and transformation; so that you can start recognizing the attributes of your own divinity in your everyday life. Move one step at a time and soon you will realize how fast you are moving.

We intend to bring you awareness on what has been created in order to assist your humanness to understand and close any experiences which are no longer appropriate or necessary for embodied living.

So allow Us, Adam and Isis, to walk with you through the next pages so that together we can honor the grandness of being human.
